Is Basement a Primary Living Area?

Determine, if possible, if the basement is used as an essential living area, such as space that is used as a required (versus optional) bedroom. Family rooms are not considered essential living areas. A finished basement does not necessarily make it an essential living area. A basement apartment or garden apartment is considered an essential living area. If a dwelling is a split-level or tri-level design, indicate this in the Additional Comments section.

- Yes No

Insurance Type:

- Homeowners Renters Flood Insurance None Unknown

Structural Damage:

If there is obvious/visible structural damage to the dwelling, select "Yes" and briefly describe in the Additional Comments section. If no obvious/visible structural damage, select "No". Structural damage is related to the integrity of the structure. Structural damage may include collapsed basement walls and large cracks in the foundation. Structural damage does not include damage to drywall, carpet, or paneling.
